

The Municipal Management Association of Southern California is pleased to announce the launch of its Job Shadowing Program, a new initiative that will positively impact the future of government management. Be a part of something great! Participate in Job Shadow 2009.

What is Job Shadow 2009?

MMASC's Job Shadow Program will be held the week of November 2, 2009. The program offers an opportunity for local government managers to host talented undergraduate and graduate degree candidates to experience a half day of job shadowing, showing them firsthand the work of a city administrator and to build relationships in the local government community. For government management staff, the program is a way to help attract the next generation of workers as well as recruit future talent.

With increased attention on the role of government in our society and the issues that many local governments in California are facing with budget cutbacks, there is no better time than the present to give future local government leaders a positive experience serving local communities.

Does Job Shadowing make a difference?

Job Shadowing is increasingly important for students because it acquaints them with the world of work through on-the-job experiences. In addition, it provides participants with the ability to ask career and industry-related questions directly to government management professionals.

Where will Job Shadow 2009 take place?

Job Shadow 2009 will take place in cities, counties, and special districts throughout Southern California.
